
Party Factions Plagued G. O. P., Are Democrats Next To Feel It?

Party Unity gave Michigan Republicans trouble for years. Beginning with the administration of the late governor Kim Sigler, cleavages developed that seriously hampered Republican gubernatorial candidates attempting to rally support from all factions of the party. After 10 years, traces of dis-unity still persist.

During this period, Democrats demonstrate that party unity can produce remarkable voting strength at the polls. Since 1948, when Governor Williams captured the machinery of the state Democratic party, policy decisions were dutifully carried out by all loyal followers—with no questions asked.

Is the governor headed for trouble now? Political observers discern a reaction against the Williams rule. It seems to be developing with little groups of his followers which are drifting away from the fold.

For instance, they point to the past spring convention when many old-line Democrats were angered by the Governor's action in springing Atty. Gen. Thomas M. Kavanagh as a possible national committeeman.

Portions of the organized labor movement have refused to give the wholehearted endorsements that are generally expected by the Democrats as a matter of course. This is particularly true among groups of skilled workers who feel their interests have been neglected in favor of unskilled labor.

At the grass roots level, sheriffs and justices of the peace—both potent political powers, are irritated over actions taken by members of the governor's political family.

Sheriffs across the state will remember at election time the campaign waged against them by Secretary of State James M. Hare to deprive their power to issue driver's licenses.

Justices of the Peace likewise are disgusted with the broad charges leveled against them by the auditor general. They contend that such a campaign is merited against anyone abusing the power of his office, but that Kavanagh's charges were stretched to make innocent judges look guilty.

Advisors to the governor are anticipating a loss of votes in state metropolitan areas where Williams' espousal of the Negro cause stirred up animosities among white Democrats.

With chinks appearing in the foundations of support for Williams, political observers are waiting for the answer at election time to their biggest question:

Are there enough new backers in the governor's camp to offset the losses from groups which formerly were among the strongest supporters?

The game of politics often provides fascinating paradoxes. On one issue Governor Williams describes a "terrible economic situation" in Michigan. On another the says that Michigan has more jobs than ever.

At the same time some legislators and industry spokesmen argue that plants are leaving or bypassing the state because of high taxes. They also report that business here is getting better. The two hot battles have the same opponents. In the case of need for an unemployment insurance program to pay a worker 90% of his income for 38 weeks, the governor points to the large number unemployed. Industry says the situation is temporary; that things will soon be much better.

When arguing about Michigan's ability to hold and attract new industry, big employers emphasize taxes are so high it is difficult to meet competition without losing money.

And the governor states that since 1954 Michigan experienced a net gain of 97,000 jobs.

It will be interesting to note what Governor Williams says when he paints a black economic picture for the legislature at their summer session. He may be challenged about the words he spoke at Mackinac Island.

"Some of those involved (in the tax hearings) are trying to create a fear psychology for political purposes, when he tries to reconcile his stand that business is 'good' but employment is 'bad'."

"Things could be better" in Michigan's tourist industry, say officials. They admit that unseasonably cool summer weather prevents any possible repetition of last year's $60 million dollar tourist record.

"There's plenty of tourist movement, but people are not staying long in any one place," says Robert Furlong, executive secretary of the State Tourist Council. "They try out one resort, get discouraged by the weather in a couple of days and move on. Some of them go home and some of them just drive-around the state."

The coolest July in many years is a prime reason for the slump. Temperatures over 90 degrees were recorded only twice during the month, according to weather officials. The average fell far below normal.

No areas are especially hard hit, Furlong states. But tourist business is down in all parts of the state.

Ending on a note of optimism Furlong states, "the forecast is for warmer weather during August, I understand, and that would certainly help."

Not In The Dark...

Every election year at about this time "Get Out the Ballot" campaigns swing into high gear throughout the country. It's a rare citizen indeed who doesn't read and that voting is both a privilege and a duty, incumbent upon all.

This year a nation-wide campaign to persuade people to vote is under way—and it goes a long step farther than the American Heritage Foundation, aided by 130 cooperating organizations representing groups as varied as business executives, union members, lawyers and many others, has come up with the slogan: "Vote—But Don't Vote in the Dark!"

William Hard, writing in The Reader's Digest, tells the story under the striking title: "Register! Inform Yourself! Vote!" And the big emphasis is on those words, "Inform Yourself!" Anyone can mark an X on a ballot or pull the handle of a voting machine. It takes some extra effort to vote intelligently, with knowledge of just what the competing candidates and for.

There is no doubt that intensive campaigns such as the American Heritage Foundation is conducting doing on the vote. The Foundation waged its first national campaign in 1952, and 63 per cent of eligible voters made their choices known, as against 51 per cent in 1948. In 1954 the Foundation was busy with other matters and did not conduct a campaign—and the percentage dropped to 52 per cent.

Mr. Hard observes that compulsory voting laws are sometimes urged for this country. In countries where there is no vote brings a fine—Belgium and Australia—turnout customarily runs around 95 per cent. But it is obvious that forcing a man to vote does not and cannot make him an informed or thoughtful voter. Also, as Mr. Hard writes, "Legislation to compel the exercise of the right is a denial of liberty."

Moreover, Europe teaches us that compulsion is not necessary. In recent elections in a lengthy list of non-compulsion countries the turnout ranged from 77 per cent in Britain to an amazing 96 per cent in Austria. General Gruenther, head of NATO, wrote the Foundation: "Although I never cease to be proud of being an American, I have been impressed during my five years in Europe by the high percentage of Europeans who go to the polls to vote. Their record is better than ours in this all-important matter of individual participation in government."

'CALIFORNIA, HERE I COME'

From now until election day you will be bombarded with appeals to vote—even loudspeakers at scores of ballparks will broadcast the message.

Finally, Mr. Hard observes that our responsibility as a great world leader demands "that we must read, we must listen, we must study, we must think—and then say at the polls what kind of country and what kind of world we want."

Lip Service...

Woodrow Wilson—who was a teacher and historian as well as a statesman—showed rare prescience when he said in 1914: "Liberty does not consist... in mere general declarations of the rights of men. It consists in the translation of these declarations into definite action."

Everyone, with hardly an exception, pays lip service to liberty. But more and more have seemed willing to surrender rights, obligations and responsibilities to the greatest enemy of human liberty—all-powerful government.

"When the history of this age of peril, prosperity and hope for atom peace is fully described, great credit for maintaining our freedom will go to the American press, and particularly the country and suburban newspaper."—Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks.

10 Cities Have Shown Way to Cut Traffic Deaths
Tough Stepped-Up Enforcement, Get-Tough Drives

Days of winking at drivers who break the law are coming to an end. The era of coddling lawbreakers soon will be over, it is hoped.

Over the nation many cities and state police departments are cracking down on flat law violators in a determined effort to bring relief in our present traffic emergency.

Every day, more and more public officials are recognizing that traffic offenders are a public menace and that drastic measures must be taken to protect the public and the careful and abiding drivers from these deadly highway maniacs.

Just one year alone traffic law violators are involved in the deaths of 10 of the nation's 38,000 highway victims.

Unfortunately, many of the steps taken for correction are read-justed. As the results have been the same—lives have been saved and the accident rate has dropped.

The law enforcement approach is spreading to more cities and to county and state levels. The spread to state levels is significant because more than half of all traffic fatalities occur on roads under the jurisdiction of state and county police departments.

A recent survey shows that governments of 38 states either have launched get-tough drives or are considering such action.

About two years ago Gov. Langley of Washington inaugurated an enforcement drive called the "governor's traffic war." The accident rate in Washington dropped immedramatically, and conclusively that the best way to save lives in traffic is to deter lawbreakers through stepped-up and impartial enforcement programs.

Although law enforcement is essential to the life-saving effort, it is only one of two basic ingredients, said Kreml, now on leave from his LACP post to head the Transportation Center, Evanston, Ill.

"The other important ingredient is support and acceptance by the public of good enforcement to the point where any driver who gets a ticket fully realizes that the policeman who is writing the summons is exercising the kind of supervision that some day could save the life of the offender's family," Kreml said.

In each of the cities that have stepped up law enforcement, the results have been the same—lives have been saved and the accident rate has dropped.

The law enforcement approach is spreading to more cities and to county and state levels. The spread to state levels is significant because more than half of all traffic fatalities occur on roads under the jurisdiction of state and county police departments.

A recent survey shows that governments of 38 states either have launched get-tough drives or are considering such action.

About two years ago Gov. Langley of Washington inaugurated an enforcement drive called the "governor's traffic war." The accident rate in Washington dropped immediately, and it's been estimated that the drive has saved about 175 lives.

Other states have experienced similar success through get-tough drives on violators.

Over one three-day holiday, Illinois traffic killed 47 persons. After Gov. Stratton learned state police had issued only 170 traffic tickets during that three-day period, he stepped up law enforcement over the next three-day holiday by calling out units of the national guard to add the state highway patrol.

The number of arrests climbed to 1,414, but the Illinois death count dropped to 13.

In one recent month in Vermont, accidents decreased 20 per cent as arrests increased 109 per cent. A drive in 1955 helped Idaho reduce traffic fatalities about 23 per cent. Gov. Simms of New Mexico credited the state's improved record last year to a "strenuous crack-down on moving traffic violations."

On Memorial Day, Gov. Ribicoff of Connecticut called out 100 national guardsmen and put them in 42 jeeps and three helicopters to help with traffic duty. The governor also decreed suspension of licenses for convicted speeders. The enforcement effort was so successful that not a single accident of any type occurred on either of the state's two main traffic arteries.

Cities and states that have stepped up traffic enforcement have proved that get-tough drives on lawbreakers will work and will produce dramatic life-saving results.

Guardsmen In Field Training

Mich. Guard

More than 9,000 massed troops passed in review before him and Guard leaders in the traditional Division Review Saturday afternoon. Sunday morning he delivered the principal address at memorial services held in honor of Michigan National Guard heroes of the past.

Before the review, Governor William's presented the Eisenhower Trophy to Company D, 125th Infantry Regiment, Alma, symbolizing the unit's selection as the "outstanding" company-sized unit for 1955.

He also pinned the Brigadier General Earl R. Stewart Medal on Sergeant First Class Glen J. Glessner, Company B, 246th Tank Battalion, Three Rivers, who topped a field of six finalists in the annual competition to select the outstanding enlisted soldier of the field training encampment.

A long-standing Camp Grayling training safety record was broken Sunday morning when Private First Class James U. Spires of the 107th Ordnance Company, Pontiac, suffered fatal injuries while making repairs on a tank. He was one of four men who volunteered to work that morning to complete final tests of the tank so that it could be returned to the field Monday morning.

Units will break camp Friday and prepare their equipment for storage and shipment back to home stations. Movement to home stations by commercial bus, National Guard planes and military convey will begin before dawn on Saturday. Majority of the troops will travel in the Guard's 1,500 vehicles.

Department Works Out Details For Special Deer Season

Conservation Department personnel are working out details for administration of Michigan's 1956 special deer hunting seasons.

Special seasons were established on an area and quota basis in 22 deer starvation and crop damage areas of the state by the Conservation Commission at its August 9-10 meeting. The Commission action is subject to approval by the legislative joint interim committee on administrative rules.

Under the 1956 regulations proposed by the Commission, holders of special permits will be allowed to take one deer of any age, either sex, in designated areas.

Some 65,340 permits will be offered to allow hunters to take 16,955 deer, in addition to the "bucks only" harvest of the regular November 15-30 season.

The Commission set the special seasons after hearing recommendations from the Conservation Department game division. Harry D. Ruhl, chief of the game division, said at least that number of extra deer could be harvested without exceeding "safe biological limits."

In order to obtain a special permit, a hunter must purchase a deer license and apply for the permit by October 10, specifying the area desired. If applications for any area exceed the number of permits, a drawing will be held to determine distribution.

Each permit will be valid for only one area and the permit holder will be furnished a map and description of the area.

In 19 of the areas, the special season is scheduled for December

1-2. In two other units — Bois Blanc Island and the Lake-New-Avalanche area — the special season will be concurrent with the regular November 15-30 season. A December 1-9 season again is scheduled for parts of Allegan county where crop damage occurs.

In the upper peninsula, 7000 permits will be offered in five areas and an estimated 1750 deer are to be taken December 1-2 in the first "any deer" season in the state in many years. Another 56,840 permits will be offered for 16 areas in the northern lower peninsula, with an anticipated kill of 15,130 extra deer.

conce. If he hasn't got one, call the cops.

Saturday's Free Press carried a story that the Guard is happy with Grayling, and like to come here. Which is a mighty fine tribute to our people, thinks Jack Pine. And on the other side of the fence is the comment of a local merchant who said, "I wish you would say in your column how really nice and polite and courteous and well-behaved the Guard boys are this year. It is really a pleasure to have them here." And that is enough to make any normal Grayling citizen feel a warm glow. Jack Pine, for one, is delighted that all is apparently sweetness and light in Crawford County.

Oaks Family Reunion Draws 61 Relatives

The 35th annual Oaks family reunion was held at the Hartwick Pines State Park Sunday, August 12, 1956, again proving that they are all true and loyal families. About sixty-one persons were present doing justice to a table laden with an abundance of delicious foods, which were furnished by all the ladies.

The business meeting was called to order by the president, John Deckrow of Flint. Last year's minutes were read and approved. New officers were voted into office for next year as follows: President, Leo Palmer; vice president, Junior Palmer; secretary, Eureka Stephan; entertainment committee, Marx Stephan and Norman Parker.

The bills were turned in for gifts, prizes and ice cream. All bills approved.

All present voted to hold next year's reunion again at the Hartwick Pines, the second Sunday in August.

Gifts were given to Harry Oaks of Detroit for coming the furthest distance, Thorenia West, the youngest and Mrs. Bertha Oaks, the eldest member present, both from Clio.

The business meeting was adjourned and everyone went to the play area and ball field.

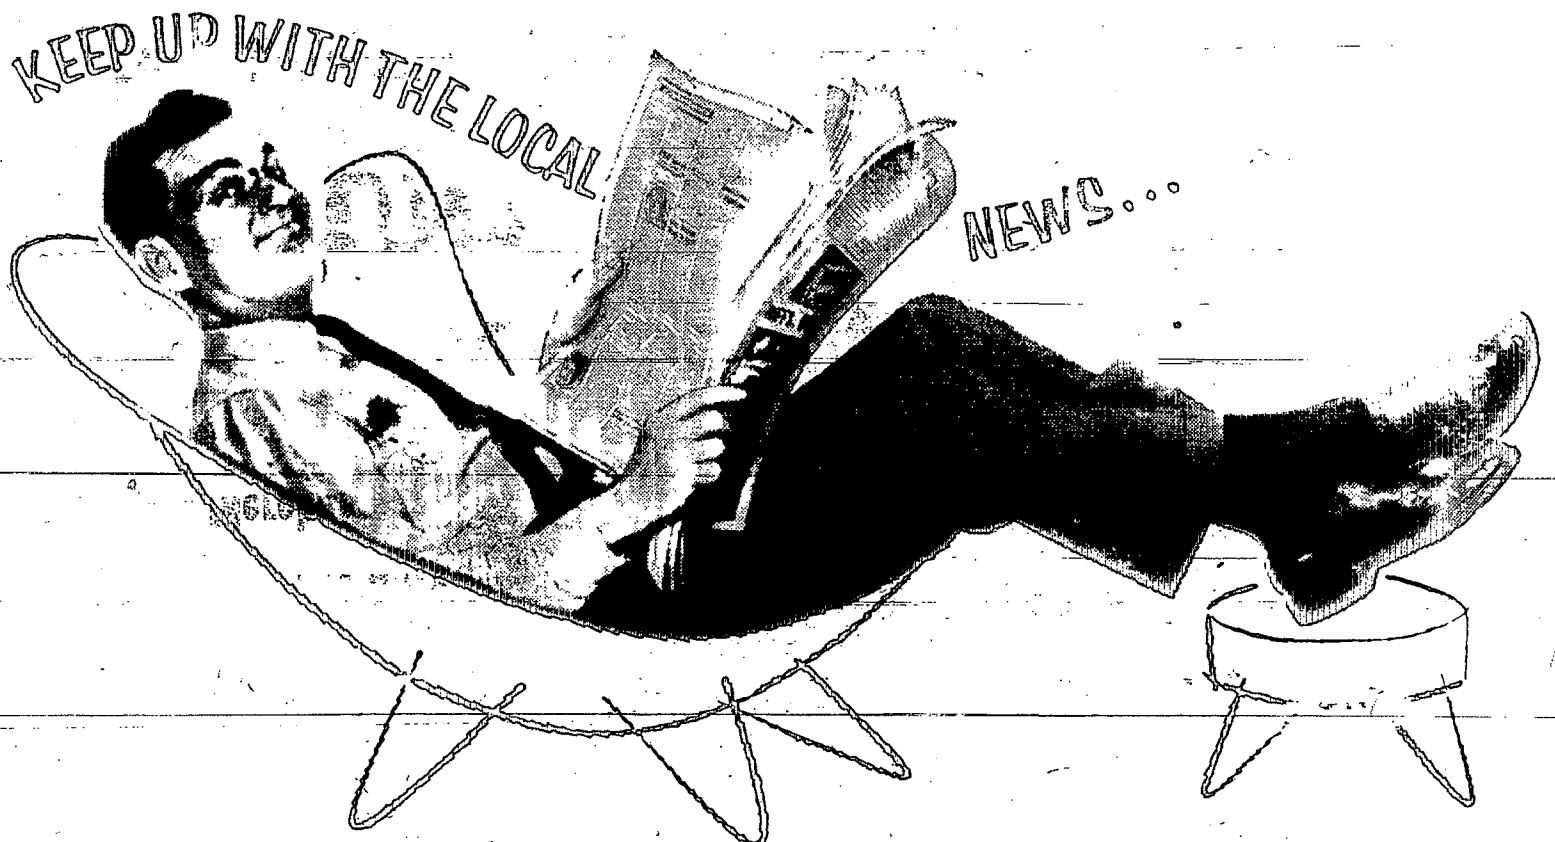

Several races were run with the winners being: Girl's races, small age group, Brenda West; middle age group, Marilyn Parker; big age group, Bonnie West. Boy's races, winners—small age group, Michael Palmer; big age group, Ray Oaks, Jr. Races for all age children — Bonnie West; ladies, Helen Hatfield.

As ball practice started, Leo Palmer batted the ball the greatest distance. The people present chose sides with Ray Oaks manager of the Oaks team and Leo Palmer, manager of the Acorns team. The ball game finally got underway which lasted six innings with the Oaks beating the Acorns 20 to 14.

A tug of war game was played by many only to have the rope break with everyone having a good spill, this happened twice but with a third try, Mrs. Ray Oaks team was successful at pulling the hardest and winning.

Ice cream was given out to all as the reunion closed for another year with everyone not saying goodbye but only "Au Revoir."
